INTRODUCTION.

The earliest records dealt with in this volume are the Court Minutes of the East India Company, which, with a few gaps, cover the whole period from the establishment of the Company in 1600 to the transfer of its authority to the Crown in 1858. The Home Letters received and sent, and the References to and Reports of the Committee of Correspondence, date from the early years of the eighteenth century. The correspondence with India is practically continuous from about the middle of that century; for earlier dates, reference should be made to the "List of Factory Records" (India Office, 1897), though it may be mentioned here that for a period of about 40 years from 1709 very few letters from India have survived. Abstracts of them, however, are in existence (see pages 19 and 32).

The "Parchment Records" (page 78), consisting mainly of Charters, Warrants, Letters Patent, &c., date from the foundation of the Company, and are of considerable interest.

A number of miscellaneous volumes have been grouped together under the headings "Home Miscellaneous" (page 92) and "Miscellaneous Military Records" (page 216), indexes to which will be found respectively on pages xvii. and xxvi.

The classification of a large body of Records, such as those catalogued in this volume, must necessarily follow, to a great extent, the system of registration in use at the time when the documents came into existence. The main principle adopted by the East India Company, and, in a certain degree, by the India Office from 1859 to 1879, was that each file of correspondence should be resolved into its component parts (Letter, Despatch, Home Letter out &c.), and that each such part should be bound in a series with other similar documents. Thus we find separate series of Letters, Despatches, Home Letters sent, Home Letters received, &c. The Board of Control adopted the same principle, but divided their copies of Letters and Despatches into series according to the department from which they emanated, such as Public, Financial, &c. These series, known as "Board's Copies," are included in the India Office Records, and consist of duplicate copies of documents in the Court's set of Letters and Despatches. In 1880 the Registry system of the India Office was revolutionised, the principle being adopted that each letter should be retained in a file with a draft of its answer, and any other documents to which it may have given rise. For this reason the year 1879 was considered a suitable date at which to end the present catalogue, though in one or two cases it will be seen that a series has been prolonged beyond that period.

For the sake of convenience, it has long been the custom in the India Office to describe a Government communication from India as a "Letter." and one to India as a "Despatch." This practice has been adhered to in the following pages.

This list deals only with such Records as have not already been catalogued in the following works published by the India Office, viz., "List of Factory Records," "List of Marine Records," various Lists of Proceedings of the Governments in India, and the "Classified List of Reports and other Publications." Parliamentary and Geographical Records also are excluded.

"BOARD'S COLLECTIONS."

[Note.—These volumes contain the Papers on which the various Despatches to Bengal, Madras, and Bombay were founded. In order to obtain any particular Collection, the Date and Draft Number of the Despatch must first be found; on referring then to a volume of "Registers of Collections" (see above) the Register Number of the Collection can be obtained. The Collections are arranged in the consecutive order of the Register Number. Gaps in the numbers are occasioned by the destruction of unimportant Collections.

The Registers contain no numbers between 23528 and 25529, 30099 and 40000, 40099 and 50000, 67099 and 67800, 157999 and 160000. Collections of earlier date than 1796 were found to have rotted, and were destroyed.]

MILITARY HOME CORRESPONDENCE, 1859–1881.

[Note.—The system of numbering papers in the Military Department was as follows:—"Letters received" were given a consecutive number in a register. They were afterwards divided into two classes,—(I.) Letters to which no answer was returned, or which were answered by a printed form; these were bound in order of Register Number, and were called "Military Letters received." (II.) Letters to which an answer was returned. These were sub-divided into four classes,—(a) Letters to Horse Guards, (b) Letters to War Office, (c) Letters to Admiralty, (d) Miscellaneous. Each Letter out received a number in the "Day Book," and the correspondence, both to and from, was indexed and bound in the order of this latter number. An Index of Home Letters Out will be found under the heading "Military Indexes and Registers."]

I. Military Letters received, 1861–1881. 327 volumes, bound in months or half-months.

II. (a.) Letters to Horse Guards, 1859–1881. 181 volumes, 100 numbers to volume up to Vol. 164, after which 150 to volume.
(b.) Letters to War Office, 1859–1881. 171 volumes, 100 numbers to volume up to Vol. 158, after which 150 to volume.
(c.) Letters to Admiralty, 1873–1881. 46 volumes, 100 numbers to volume.
(d.) Miscellaneous Letters Out, 1859–1881. 591 volumes, 200 numbers to volume up to Vol. 287, 100 numbers to volume from Vol. 288 to Vol. 546, after which 150 to volume.

MILITARY "MISCELLANIES."

[Note.—These volumes contain copies of Home Letters Out. Letters to the War Office, the Horse Guards, and (after 1872) the Admiralty, are contained in separate volumes. Those marked "Appendix" contain specimens of printed forms, &c., and the names of persons to whom they were sent. There is a "Miscellany Index" or "Index of Home Letters Out," 1859–1879, one volume for each year.]
